

Dean's Message

Welcome to the 18th Annual Student Poster Conference of the Faculty of Allied Health Sciences. This special event celebrates the academic achievements, creativity, and commitment of our senior students, while also recognizing the invaluable support of our dedicated faculty members.

To my dear graduating students, congratulations on your outstanding research projects. Your effort, passion, and determination have led to the impressive work we are proud to see today. Well done!

A special thank you to our faculty members and research supervisors. Your guidance and encouragement have played a big role in helping our students reach this point. We truly appreciate your support and commitment to teaching and mentoring.

This conference is not just about presenting your work, it's also a chance to learn, share ideas, network, and get inspired. The health sciences is always changing, and staying curious and open to learning will help you grow and succeed as future healthcare professionals.

Working together across different fields and disciplines is also important. I encourage you to build connections, explore new ideas, and take part in projects that make a real difference in health care.

Thank you to everyone who contributed to making this event a success. Let's keep working together to improve and grow in our field.

Congratulations again, and I wish you all the best in your future journey.
